the friends of the two colonels were sorry for them. At first appraisal of their athletes I think that the two colonels were a little sorry for themselves. Looking back at the aggregation made up of Birdie Cree, Jack Warlop, Harry Wolters, big Ed Sweeney, Hughey High and Ezra Midkiff the club that the colonels bought certainly seemed like a gold brick with very little gilt on it.

gilt on it.

The two colonels began to spend money lavishly and in a spectacular fashion. The climax of this orgy of spending was the purchase of Babe Ruth from the Boston Red Sox for a sum close to $150,000. Again the friends of the two colonels began to feel sorry for them.

for them.

But the Yankees began to fill the Polo Grounds. For every dollar that the colonels spent they began to take in two and three through the box office. From the poorest property-from the financial as well as baseball point of view—in big league baseball the Yankees became the richest. At the zenith of Babe Ruth's career attendance at Yankee baseball games broke all records for attendance in professional baseball. It is safe to guess that the two colonels divides more than they paid for the ball

The two Colonels also made themselves felt in the management of organized baseball. The partnership is responsible for a great extent for the determining of Ban Johnson, who posed as "Czar of Baseball," and the appointment of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis as High Commissioner.

Col. Rupperf came to the Yankee offices yesterday and announced quietly that he intended to take over the entire ownership of the Yankees as soon as the details of the transfer could be the control of the Colone of the Yankees as soon as the details of the transfer could be the colone of the Yankees as soon as the details of the transfer could be the colone of the Yankees as soon as the details of the transfer could be the colone of the Yankees as soon as the details of the transfer could be the colone of the Yankees as soon as the details of the transfer could be the colone of the colone of the yankees as soon as the details of the transfer could be the colone of the yankees are the yankees are yankees are Huston is quitting baseball, because our associations always have been of the most pleasant sort."

In the meantime the rumors persist that Col. Huston may buy some other club in Organized Baseball. This is more than highly improbable. The Colonel says that he is through owning baseball clubs and that he wants to have more time to devote to his work with the wounded veterans of the world war. Col. Muston is now National Commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and has been very active in work for the disabled soldiers.

"I want a rest," said Col. Huston, who dropped into the Yankee offices after Col. Ruppert had made his announcement that he intended to buy out his partner. "You fellows must know that it was something of a strain being half owner of the Yanks. Maybe I didn't show it, but I was bleeding inwardly at some of those crucial games.

Col. Huston seemed to demuf. "Oh, well," he said, "as long as I am getting out of baseball I suppose that I will have no more use for the iron hat. It might as well go, though I would like to keep it as a memento of the stirring actions at Coogan's Bluff and elsewhere."

Mr. Douglas, reelected president, said in the course of his remarks from the chair that he favored selecting the championship links at the annual meeting rather than have the matter left to the executive committee, as has been the custom for years. The meeting did not take kindly to the suggestion, but fate interposed to support the president in consideration of at least one of the three events—the open. This was made possible by the fact that Cance Brook was the only club to offer its course.

"That is closed," said Mr. Douglas emphatically. "Cance Brook gets the cpen. The executive committee is saved that much work."

Before any action whatsoever could be taken on the amateur championship the question as to rotating the title events brought up a year ago-had to be disposed of. While it will take until next year to get an amendment to this into

This action automatically closed the door to consideration of several clubs from other districts offering for the amateur. Those in the running are Apawamis, Siwanoy, Sleepy Hollow, Wykagyl and Hudson River. Westchester-Bilimore also made application, but this fact seemed to be overlooked in the announcement by Mr. Douglas that five organizations had made the offer of their links. of the Class B metropolitan squash ten-nis championship, and are the only un-beaten teams in the tournament. ANSWER TO PROBLEM OF A BOY OF FIFTEEN IN A TOURNAMENT. M. A. P.: Inasmuch as your entrance fee had been accepted you should have been allowed to continue to play in the tournament, unless this was against the rules of the club. In this case the starter evidently did not realize you were only fifteen years old. If there was a rule against boys playing it should have been your duty to acquaint the starter with the fact that you were only fifteen and then let him make his decision. This is always up to the committee in charge of the tournament, which has the right to conduct tournaments as it sees fit.

PROBLEM OF WHAT CONSTITUTES A TERING GROUND. "Dear Mr. Hutchison: In a tournament recently a discussion arose when one of the players insisted on using the very back end of the tee, claiming that he had a right to go as far back as he liked.

"I claimed that he could only go back one yard, or one club length, from the marks. Another member of the foursome said he could go back three club lengths.

into a pennant winning team.

The Colonels were a bright spot in baseball. Business men and gentlemen, they made many friends and have them still. From them those interested in the game met with courtesy and a straight answer.

Now Col. Huston has decided to withdraw from the game for which he has done much. No one appears to regret it more than Col. Ruppert. "In all the years we have been associated," he says, "we never have had swinging a big business deal. Any sum in the vicinity of a million dollars is a lot of money. Many suppose that all a very rich man has to do is to sign a check for the amount. But even a very rich man doesn't keep that amount of cash on hand. His holdings are invested and the sale of over a million in securities to switch the money to other things is considerable

While there were said to be many purchasers for Col. Huston's interest in the club, it was suggested that few of them received consideration, as aside from Col. Ruppert most of them wished to purchase on the plan of so much

No terms of the transfer have been made public, but the most likely hitch in the proceedings would appear to concern the disposition of the famous iron hat. It has been agreed that Col. Ruppert shall take over all other holdings, including the bat boy, but whether the hat is personal property or belongs to the partnership is a mooted question.

If Col. Huston follows his plan of going abroad he wouldn't be here to wear the hat anyhow, but when St. Louis or Detroit came to town Cousin Egbert Barrow might be delegated to wear it. On the other hand occasions when Col. Huston would need it with him. He, of course, would

With the coming of Frank Chance the Red Sox are apt to regain some of their lost popularity in Boston. Chance belongs to the old school of fighters. As one newspaper man out it, "I like Chance because he always gives you a straight answer-whether he insults you or not."

The Peerless Leader has a keen sense of humor. This is fortunate, a he may need it in Boston. But here is one story he tells on himself: the days when he was trying to lead the Yankees out of the slough of despoi he disapproved of a play made by Birdle Cree. "Somebody told me you were a ball player," he thundered at Birdle. "Yes," replied Cree, "and somebody told me you were a manager.'

Little Jack Warhop, as game a pitcher as the Yankees ever owned, talked with friends in the lobby of the Waldorf. Jack would make a corking coach of pitchers for some big league club.

Trinity Club Boxer Stops But- O'Rourke Would Stage Bout at Polo Grounds Before Jack and Wills Clash.

By Charles F. Mathison.

Ben Butler, the big, red haired thumper of the Trinity Club, Brooklyn, bumped into a tartar at Madison Square Garden last night in the person of Alex Scliar, the Jack Dempsey of the amateurs. Scliar stopped Butler in 44 seconds of the second round.

In view of the fact that Butler defeated Gordon Munce, Metropolitan champion, in bouts at the Trinity Club last week, he was the popular favorite to win over Scliar. Butler certainly looked the victor for he put Scliar is nething if not game, and he shape and that he really be almost like a certainty just now that Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey will punch away at each other for the second

Butler was shaky when he reached his seat and was wabbly when he campout for the second round.

Sliar knocked him down three times in quick succession and referce Forbes stopped the bout.

A chocolate colored negro named Robtert Anderson greatly resembling the late George Dixon, furnished the first thrill of the night when he knocked out a red thatched Irish lad named John Flood in the third round. Flood had Anderson on the floor twice in the first round, and once in the second.

Anderson put up a hot battle in the third round and sent Flood down on the back of his head. He was unconscious when he was picked up by the referee and lugged to his corner.
